Dr. Willis is a sports medicine surgeon at the Sports Medicine Center and the Hand & Upper Extremity Center at Tri-County Orthopedics, who specializes in athletic injuries and disorders of the shoulder, knee, elbow, wrist, and hand. He's also a specialist in advanced arthroscopic and minimally invasive surgery, ligament reconstruction, cartilage restoration procedures, fracture care, tendon repair, and upper extremity joint replacement. Dr. Willis has been a member of Tri-County Orthopedics since 2004, where he currently serves as the director of Sports Medicine Research and Fellowship Education.

Prior to joining Tri-County Orthopedics, Dr. Willis graduated Cum Laude from Dartmouth College, where he received his undergraduate degree in biology. While a student at Dartmouth, Dr. Willis was a member of both the football and lacrosse teams. Following graduation, Dr. Willis received his medical degree, with honors (Alpha Omega Alpha), from Columbia University and completed his residency in orthopedic surgery at the Hospital for Special Surgery at Cornell Medical Center in New York City. He completed fellowships at the Mayo Clinic and the Hospital for Special Surgery, where he trained under the team doctors for the New York Giants and the New York Mets.

Hometown choice.”*

Dr. Willis also has an interest and passion for research and continuing education. He is the author of numerous peer-reviewed original research studies that have been published in top peer-reviewed journals. His research contributions in the field of shoulder surgery have been recognized and honored internationally by the American Shoulder and Elbow Surgeons Society.

In addition to being recognized as a New Jersey Top Doc and New Jersey Top Surgeon, Dr. Willis has been presented numerous times with the Patient's Choice Award, an honor given out for outstanding patient reviews.
